Meeting at Clinton.

Owing to the inclement weather-the rain pouring down in torrents-there was no meeting at Clinton on Friday last, but on Saturday there was a very fine gathering at the Court House. During the day speeches were made by Hon. Warren Winslow, and by E. G. Haywood, Esq., and at night there was a torch light procession and speaking by Wm. S. Devane, Thomas Holmes and Duncan Devane, Esqrs. Allmand McKay, Esq., one of the Sub-electors for the State at large, who was to have spoken, was prevented by serious indisposition. Warren Johnson, Esq., was called upon but did not respond. We believe he was not present at the time. Every thing passed off satisfactorily, and the Democracy of Sampson are in the best spirits.

The cause of Democracy was well sustained—at any rate the Democrats of Duplin were and are satisfied of that much. Our friend Allen was present and spoke briefly, yielding the occasion to Mr. Winslow.

From the Daily Journal of yesterday. Democratte Meeting.

Lest night the Democrats of this county assembled at Major Walker's Yard on Princess Street, but adjourned thence to the Town Hall, where they listened to an able address from Hon. Warren Winslow. The Hall was well filled by a most intelligent audience, who listened attentively to Mr. Winslow's remarks from first to last, only interrupting him occasionally by an irrepressible burst of applause.

Mr. Winslow reviewed the history of parties in connection with the existing issues before the country, glancing rapidly at the Missouri Compromise, passing thence to the legislation known as the Compromise of 1850, which legislation virtually repealed the Missouri Compromise by acting irrespective of and contrary to its provisions, so that consistency required this fact, this virtual repeal to be openly stated on the occasion of the passage of territorial laws for Kansas and Nebraska. When these laws were passed, a few--a very few of those who voted for them, differed from the great majority of their supporters with reference to the powers of a terri tory over the question of slavery, and therefore provision was made in the bills for granting appeals in all cases affecting slave property, directly to the Supreme Court of the United States, so that a legal adjudication of this vexed question might be had, all agreeing to abide by that Such adjudication so far as the declaration of opinion on the part of the Court goes, was given in the Dred Scott or the enjoyment of that or any other property. Mr. Winslow ridiculed the constant cry of disunion raised and kept up against Breckinridge and Lane, because, forsooth, they were supported by this man Yancev. He did not know Mr. Yancey personally, but all agreed as to Mr. Yancey's abilities as an eloquent public speaker, and he had heard him spoken of by those who knew him best, as an honorable gentleman. Mr. Yancey had distinctly said that he was not a disunionist, unless a jealous regard for the constitutional rights of his State and section made him one.' An address, we are told, was also agreed upon, duel between Mason and McCarty (in 1829, I think), which, we suppose, embodies the reasons upon which and there are some facts omitted, which I will add.

Mason and McCarty were brothers-in-law-Mason, a man of hot and irascible temper-McCarty of a resolute but better controlled disposition. For some offense Mason challenged McCarty, who objected to a deadly combat with one so closely related to him, and offered to apologise. McCarty then proposed that both should go upon the cupola of the Capital at Washington, and leap from it, hand in hand-but this was also pronounced inadmissible. He then named muskets, loaded with two balls each, and eight paces, saying he would kill Mason—he did, being unharmed himself. The newspaper account states that McCarty's hair became white soon after, which I suppose is a mistake. I knew him ten years after the duel, and his hair was then brown, duty as the creature and instrument of Congress is to better when the works are all completed.
